Who Discovered Chocolate?

There are various opinions about when exactly cocoa come to our life or who invented it. Before B.C, a group of Olmecs grows cocoa trees in South America. Over time, the Mayans learns to make chocolate drink from the seeds of this fruit. According legend, the Aztec king - Moctezuma- was drinking fifty cups of chocolate every day.

It was also said that Olmecs was using cocoa to make a special drink for their ceremonials. Among these different legends, it is not identified well yet if they were using cocoa beans or inside of cocoa shells as the main ingredient.
